

INTRODUCING THE ASQ PACIFIC REGION NEXT GENERATION SEMINAR SERIES

August 21: The Use of Behavioral and Quality Tools to Achieve Work-Life Balance

ASQ NextGen Pacific Region has heard the voice of the customer and the need for soft skills development for its members. This seminar series is intended to provide NextGens a forum for new ideas and to learn from seminar discussions and presentations, resulting in enhancements to personal development and business acumen. The seminars will build on the foundation of quality and learning to develop a work-life balance.

The complimentary sessions will be conducted very much like undergraduate seminar discussions. Registrants will be presented with some reading material prior to each seminar. Participation in live discussions will be encouraged to improve on effective communication skills. The seminars are intended for peer-to-peer learning with the assistance of the facilitator/presenter. Integrating different fields while using quality at the helm, an open mind, and finding some sort of answer or solution are also goals.

The initial online seminar on August 21 from 9 am to 11 am PDT will be presented by Karina Rodriguez, GxP Food Industry Auditor and FSMA and Quality Control Consultant. She will discuss the use of simple behavioral and quality tools to assist in achieving work-life balance. Participants are welcome to provide other tools or methodologies that have helped them along their life and/or careers.

To register for the August 21 session, click here.